App Freezer does not break the backups of Google and Samsung IF YOU KNOW WHAT YOU ARE DOING. Kiddies shouldn't play with dangerous tools. You must know what you are doing before disabling everything listed as bloatware. It's not straightforward like that at all. I have both BKmanager and App Freezer running on dozens of Android phones that I manage for my family and backups run without fail. Most of my family is scattered throughout the US. I literally get their phone, fine tune it with this app, send it back to them, and it just works and works without fail. If you are afraid of breaking your phone, you shouldn't be running this or any other software like it. If you know what you are doing, this is the only way to turn off lots of crud without voiding warranties in order to gain back battery life and keep the battery from overheating. It's also great for disabling problematic apps that affect performance and/or security in such situations that the app cannot be uninstalled. I would give it 100 stars if I could!

I haven't always been the best at leaving reviews, but this one deserves to be the exception! Major thanks to this developer for trying so hard despite Samsungs attempts at blocking it. I had the previous app that stopped functioning with an update, but with this one I was able to get my freezer back with Tasker support! Can't thank you enough! I won't be taking any more updates lol

Very good! Would give 5 stars but the widget doesn't always respond after a while. Other than that, great app with quick access to completely disabling background processes! none of the alleged 'putting apps to sleep' just to have them auto restart. Just as good as Ice Box really but I find this one a little quicker and when the widgets work, it literally means one tap freezing/unfreezing apps.
